The National Fragile X Foundation (NFXF) is the leading national patient advocacy organization for Fragile X, a group of conditions associated with alterations on the FMR1 gene. Fragile X syndrome is considered a rare disease, known for being the leading inherited cause of intellectual disabilities and the most common single-gene link to autism. It is estimated that 100,000 Americans live with Fragile X syndrome and approximately 1.5 million carry the Fragile X premutation. The NFXF serves all individuals living with Fragile X and their loved ones, as well as the professionals who dedicate their lives to serving them.
